

Hard X-ray Free Electron Lasers Work: Present Status and Future Potential

Jerry Hastings
SLAC, Stanford

In April 2009, the Linac Coherent Light Source reached saturation at its shortest planned wavelength. There has been significant progress since. This talk will discuss how FELs work, future possibilities to tailor their properties and why one should care. Examples from plans at LCLS will form the basis for discussion.